Bio:

Randy Engle is the owner and founder of XC2 Software, that has been providing backflow prevention management software to water purveyors for over 20 years.

Randy Engle got his start in the backflow prevention industry in 1993. He had been a custom programmer for several years. After working with a large, local water utility, they encouraged him to develop a software product for program administration of Cross Connection Control/Backflow Prevention. What Randy thought would be a side business has grown to a company providing backflow software to 100's of organizations and thousands of users across North America.

Randy continues to work with water purveyors and their backflow prevention programs, providing new and needed features and functions.
